"Morgan" is a ringing and never-to-be-forgotten contribution to the English balladry; and that Mr. Bowles has surpassed himself in his parlor comedy.

The rapid movement, the constant surprises of "A Likely Story" mark it as the most artistic of all his pretty little comedies.

The conductors of "Scribner's Magazine" are to be commended upon the most brilliant number which they have thus far produced. Mr. H. W. Maybie's "Winter in the Adirondacks" leads its tempting list of papers. The fascinations of a day in the winter woods—who that knows them can ever forget them! The crackling snow, the smell of the hemlocks, the bare boughs that etch the blue sky, the tall flower stalks rustling with their caps of dried blossoms—all have a charm of their own, as beguiling as those of summer. One can almost breathe again the clear and vivid air of the snow-muffled woods as one reads Mr. Maybie's text and studies the charming illustrations that accompany it. The art of the number is full of interest and beauty, and shows marked progress. Mr. Vedder, Mr. Gibson, Mr. Low, and Mr. Binfield are among the contributors of the holiday spirit, the editor giving the best judgment of each.
